If you were a mouse in the corner...

If you were a mouse in the corner during a Justice for All trip, you would see...

JFA staff (Maureen McKinley pictured to the left) teaching high school students how to converse about the topic of abortion.

Students practicing how to explain the unborn is biologically human.

JFA mentors working in small groups with students. I'm to the left role-playing the pro-choice position while they work together to explain their pro-life position.

David Lee, JFA's executive director preparing students to give a survey and start a conversation.

The exhibit on campus with large groups of college students and high school students discussing why the unborn is a human that has intrinsic value and deserves the basic right to live.

Thank you to all of you who help make these seminars and outreaches possible! Rebecca J. Hascke
